Platinum Weekly newspaper | Rustenburg – NUM Rustenburg regional chairperson July Radibe says South Africa needs mines and industry to succeed, but success must translate into jobs, opportunities, skills and a meaningful place at the table for all South Africans.

NUM Rustenburg regional chairperson July Radibe calls for responsible investment, meaningful participation and greater opportunities for all South African workers and businesses.

Read more on page 4.

That is the message from National Union of Mineworkers (NUM) Rustenburg regional chairperson July Radibe – not only to mining houses, but also to major companies, contractors and decision-makers operating across South Africa's mining, energy, construction and metal sectors. Radibe is unashamedly pro-business. He wants mines, the energy sector and construction sector to operate productively. He wants projects to succeed, businesses to make profits and new investment to enter South Africa. Because without successful businesses there can be no sustainable jobs. But, he says, South Africans should not be spectators while major projects are developed around them. "Let South Africans with the right skills get the contracts. Let the contractors employ South Africans," Radibe told Platinum Weekly. For him, responsible sourcing should go further than checking where materials and equipment come from and how operations affect the people around it. It should also ask who receives the contracts, who gets the jobs, who is being developed and whether contractors and subcontractors are meeting their obligations in South Africa. Taxes matter too, he says. Mining houses and major institutions cannot demand accountability from their suppliers on one hand while turning a blind eye to contractors who fail to meet their tax and employment obligations on the other. Those taxes, after all, are what South Africa needs to fund schools, policing, roads, housing and infrastructure.

A life poured out for others

Platinum Weekly newspaper | Rustenburg – The passing of pastor Ignat van Dyk on Wednesday 26 August 2026 has brought immense sadness to his family, friends, congregations and the wider community. Born on 10 March 1982, pastor Ignat devoted much of his life to sharing the Gospel and guiding others towards Christ. He played an instrumental role in laying the foundation of CRC's Youth and Students Ministry in Pretoria, where his passion, energy and unwavering faith helped shape the lives of countless young people. He later served the CRC congregations in Rustenburg and Mooiooi, continuing his ministry with dedication until his passing. Tributes shared across social media describe him as a man "on fire for God", a great leader, a loyal friend and a true pillar of the CRC movement. Many remember not only the sermons he preached, but the way he welcomed people, believed in them and stood beside them during some of their most difficult moments. One tribute described his life as one of "service and sacrifice", while another honoured the enormous contribution he made to God's Kingdom. Yet, beyond the pulpit and the many lives he touched through ministry, Pastor Ignat was a deeply loved husband and father. To his family, he was far more than a respected church leader: he was their companion, protector, source of laughter and the heart of their home. Although his earthly journey ended far too soon, his influence remains alive in the people he encouraged, the young leaders he helped develop, the families he supported and the countless hearts he pointed towards Jesus. Pastor Ignat van Dyk will be remembered not simply for what he accomplished, but for how generously he gave of himself. His was a life lived with purpose — a life of faith, love and faithful service. His memorial service will take place at CRC Pretoria on Friday, 11 September 2026, at 11:00. May his beloved family, congregations and friends find comfort in the knowledge that his life mattered profoundly and that the seeds he planted will continue to bear fruit for generations.

OUR PEOPLE FIRST

Platinum Weekly newspaper | Rustenburg – NUM Rustenburg regional chairperson July Radibe says South Africa needs mines and industry to succeed, but success must translate into jobs, opportunities, skills and a meaningful place at the table for all South Africans.

REAL participation
Radibe has become a familiar figure at negotiations, demonstrations and disputes involving some of the biggest employers in the Rustenburg region. His approach is based on something deceptively simple: people cannot complain afterwards about an outcome if they did not do everything reasonably possible to participate and change that outcome while they still had the opportunity. That requires REAL participation... not consultation merely to tick a box, but actual conversations, actual negotiation and a genuine willingness by all sides to listen to and consider the opinions and options of the other party or parties. Radibe says his own roots are in the mining industry. He came through Anglo American Platinum, which supported his studies, and after completing his engineering studies he worked in the industry. It was there that his interest in organising and representing his fellow workers developed, eventually leading him to his present position in the NUM.

The relationship between organised labour and big business has also matured, he says. Unions increasingly recognise that companies must remain viable, productive and competitive if jobs are to survive. At the same time, responsible companies increasingly understand that organised labour is not simply an obstacle to business, but an important stakeholder. That relationship becomes particularly important when jobs are threatened. The history of the Rustenburg mining belt has taught painful lessons about what can happen when trust collapses and people believe their voices are not being heard. Radibe invokes the memory of Marikana not to equate every labour dispute with that tragedy, but as a reminder of why transparency, dialogue and genuine participation matter. NUM's mission statement reflects the wider role the union now sees for itself: "The National Union of Mineworkers (NUM) is a labour organisation that recruits, organises and advances the interests of all workers employed in the mining, energy, construction and metal sectors and allied industries by empowering its members through quality services."

Bakubung: jobs on the line
Those principles are now being tested at Bakubung Platinum Mine near Ledig. Bakubung is the flagship operation of JSE-listed Wesizwe Platinum. Wesizwe describes the mine as having an expected 30-year life of mine and openly acknowledges the considerable influence of its Chinese consortium shareholder, Jinchuan Mining and the China-Africa Development Fund, on the company's strategy. Bakubung Platinum Mine is owned by Wesizwe Platinum Limited, which is a JSE-listed South African company, which is owned by its controlling/ major shareholder which is Chinese-linked. Wesizwe itself describes this as its Chinese consortium shareholder, made up of Jinchuan Group and the China-Africa Development Fund (CAD Fund), with the balance held by other South African and institutional shareholders. Chinese funding nevertheless plays a critical role. Wesizwe's audited 2025 financial statements recorded material uncertainty over the group's ability to continue as a going concern and said its future was dependent on continued financial support from Jinchuan Group (Hong Kong) Resources Holdings Limited. Against that background, Wesizwe announced in June that it would abandon its previous 1-million-tonne-a-year production strategy and instead pursue a single-stage ramp-up towards a future 3.5 Mtpa operation. The restructuring accompanying that decision could affect approximately 497 employees out of a workforce of 706. For Ledig and surrounding communities, those are not merely numbers on a SENS announcement. They represent households, school fees, food on tables and money circulating through local businesses. On Thursday, 27 August 2026, NUM's Rustenburg Region, the Ledig Traditional Office and community members marched against the proposed retrenchments at Bakubung and handed a memorandum to mine management. It followed months of uncertainty. Operations were temporarily shut down in June during the Section 189A consultation process, followed by a phased restart. On 31 July, Wesizwe again temporarily suspended mining operations after employee feedback sessions and a gathering of workers at the mine, saying safety and security risks had increased to an unacceptable level.

Serious allegations
Radibe's concerns extend beyond the number of threatened jobs. He says that Chinese personnel and contractors exercise disproportionate influence at Bakubung and questions whether South African managers always have the authority their job titles would suggest. He further alleges that Chinese personnel are being protected from the effects of the restructuring while South African workers carry the brunt of the proposed job losses. Radibe also raises concerns about procurement and contracting, claiming that significant opportunities and purchasing are directed towards Chinese suppliers and contractors instead of being used sufficiently to develop South African capacity. He questioned the use of an accommodation complex at the mine, which he says was originally presented as employee accommodation but is predominantly occupied by Chinese personnel and visitors. "They have Chinese chefs at the complex, preparing food for the Chinese employees and their visitors," Radibe alleges. These are serious allegations.

Platinum Weekly has not independently verified these claims and has afforded Bakubung Platinum Mine/ Wesizwe Platinum an opportunity to respond. There is, however, independently verifiable Chinese involvement in Bakubung's development. Wesizwe has previously contracted Chinese companies for various aspects of the project, and in 2025 confirmed that Sinosteel had been brought in to assist with rectification work on defects identified in the concentrator plant. Radibe stresses that NUM is not calling for Bakubung to close. Quite the opposite. NUM wants the mine to succeed. But, he says, it must become the kind of responsible contributor that South Africans should be entitled to expect from a major mining operation: one that complies with employment and transformation requirements, develops South African skills, gives capable local businesses a fair opportunity and meaningfully engages with the people whose lives are affected by its decisions.

NUM Rustenburg regional chairperson July Radibe calls for responsible investment, meaningful participation and greater opportunities for all South African workers and businesses.

NUM and AMCU
Radibe also rejects the idea that organised labour's different banners automatically make unions enemies. He says NUM and the Association of Mineworkers and Construction Union (AMCU) may compete for membership and may disagree on issues, but fundamentally they are fighting many of the same battles. Workers' livelihoods, safety, fair remuneration and dignity do not change according to the logo on a union shirt. At Bakubung, both unions are recognised labour representatives. Wesizwe announced in July that an agreement had been reached with AMCU, while NUM continued operating under an existing peace agreement signed in February 2024.

When a mine reaches the end
Radibe's concerns about accountability do not end while a mine is producing. When the life of mine eventually runs out, mining companies remain responsible for rehabilitation. He believes abandoned workings, open shafts and infrastructure left underground can create opportunities for illegal mining and theft long after formal operations have ceased. In the Rustenburg area, he says, part of the illegal underground activity involves people entering old workings to recover valuable material such as copper cable and other infrastructure left behind. His message is that rehabilitation cannot be treated as an afterthought. Financial provision for rehabilitation must be protected, oversight must be credible and companies must be held accountable for leaving mining areas in a safe condition once operations end. Radibe also believes South Africa must have a more nuanced conversation about illegal mining. While organised criminal mining must be dealt with, he believes there may be small-scale operators who could potentially be brought into a lawful, regulated system with the right government support – provided they meet the same fundamental safety and tax requirements expected elsewhere in the industry.

Small mine, same worker
The same principle applies to the growing number of smaller mining operations and contractors. A worker does not lose the need for protection because the company employing him or her is small. Radibe says even where a mining operation employs only a handful of people, those workers should still be able to organise and seek representation. Small mining businesses should pursue opportunities, he says. "We are pro-business. We want operations to be productive and make profit, which is positive towards employment. South Africa needs to create jobs." But growth, the effect on the community and worker protection cannot be treated as separate items. For Radibe, these issues must go together.

South Africa needs investment. It needs mines, it needs electricity, it needs construction. It needs contractors. It needs entrepreneurs. And it desperately needs businesses that are profitable enough to create long-term employment.

But the people living in the area, and the people working in these sectors must see the benefit. That is the line NUM says it intends to hold: Business must flourish, be transparent and put people first – and South Africans must not be left standing outside the gate.

BAKUBUNG PLATINUM MINE RESPONSE

Bakubung Platinum Mine has noted the article to be published by Platinum Weekly and the views expressed by NUM Rustenburg regional chairperson July Radibe. The Mine recognises organised labour as an important stakeholder and remains committed to constructive engagement, responsible business practices, transformation and meaningful participation by South Africans in the mining industry. While we respect the right of stakeholders to raise concerns, a number of assertions contained in the article are presented as allegations and have not been independently verified. The Mine does not believe it would be constructive to debate these matters extensively through the media. Bakubung Platinum Mine remains committed to conducting its restructuring and operational processes within the applicable legal and regulatory framework, while engaging affected employees, organised labour and relevant stakeholders through the appropriate established processes. Our immediate focus remains the safe and sustainable operation of the Mine, organisational stability and ensuring that Bakubung continues to contribute meaningfully to its employees, surrounding communities and the broader South African economy. We remain available to engage constructively with our stakeholders through the appropriate channels.

The truck was destroyed in the N4 blaze.

Truck goes up in flames on N4

Platinum Weekly newspaper | Rustenburg – A truck carrying plastic bottles and gas cylinders caught fire on the N4, shortly past the Koster turn-off and N4 Guest Lodge, on Thursday, 27 August 2026.

The truck was destroyed in the blaze. Fortunately, the driver escaped unharmed and sustained no injuries. The cause of the fire was not confirmed at the time of publication.

The remains of the freestanding, thatched-roofed house following the devastating blaze.

The fire-gutted house on the farm Magathashoek, where virtually everything inside was destroyed.

Marilize Huisamen is appealing for assistance after her rented home and possessions were destroyed by fire.

From ashes, a plea for a new beginning

Platinum Weekly newspaper | Rustenburg – A woman escaped with burn injuries after a devastating fire destroyed the house she rented on the farm Magathashoek, along the R52 just outside Rustenburg, in the Kgetlengrivier municipal area, shortly after midnight on Wednesday, 19 August 2026.

According to her daughter, Marilize Huisamen, her mother – who is also named Marilize Huisamen – was living alone in the freestanding, thatched-roofed house.

She woke at approximately 00:20 after noticing a strange smell. When she entered the living room, she discovered that the couches were on fire. She attempted to extinguish the flames with water, but the fire spread rapidly. She managed to escape and close the valve of a large gas cylinder outside. By the time she tried to return, the flames were already too high for her to re-enter the house safely.

Although she was able to save her parrot and two cockatiels, she could not reach her beloved dog and two cats. Babatjie, a one-and-a-half-year-old Yorkshire terrier, Sokkies, a two-year-old cat, and Blitz, a four-month-old kitten, died in the fire.

Everything inside the house was destroyed, including clothing, furniture, appliances, identity documents, photographs and treasured sentimental possessions.

The contents were not insured, although the property owner reportedly has insurance on the house.

Marilize's mother sustained burns to the back of her head and hands and was taken to a doctor the following morning. She initially stayed with her son and is currently sharing a room with her granddaughters at her other daughter's home. She has since returned to work but continues to struggle with anxiety and the emotional impact of the fire.

The cause of the blaze remains unknown. A statement was submitted to the Koster police, and the circumstances surrounding the fire are being investigated.

The family hopes to help Marilize find a place of her own again and begin replacing essential furniture and household items. "We would like to thank every person who has already donated clothing, toiletries and cleaning products," her daughter said. "It was incredible to see even people we do not know going out of their way to help us."

Anyone who would like to assist the family may contact Marilize Huisamen, the daughter, on 072 349 5630, or Marilize Huisamen, the mother, on 072 850 7686.

Our Ward Matters continues hands-on work across Rustenburg WE RETURN. WE MAINTAIN. WE MONITOR. WE ACT.

Platinum Weekly newspaper | Rustenburg – Our Ward Matters (OWM) continued its efforts across Rustenburg this past week, tackling overgrown vegetation, litter and illegal dumping while encouraging residents to take greater pride in their surroundings.

Founded by Ward 15 councillor André van Dyk and working under the leadership of Cllr Van Dyk and Cllr Tanya Rothman, the initiative remains active in Wards 15, 16 and 17.

Cleaning and clearing Ward 17

On Wednesday, 26 August, OWM and Cllr Rothman tackled illegal dumping and litter from the Rivers area towards Selly Park.

Despite facing the same recurring problems after almost five years of cleaning, the team remains committed to educating residents and encouraging responsibility for shared spaces. On Thursday, 27 August, the team moved into Dachill, clearing overgrown vegetation and grass encroaching onto the road to improve visibility, safety and the area's appearance.

Consistent care in Ward 15

On Monday, 31 August, the team inspected Ward 15 and welcomed the removal of discarded couches near BP Safari and along Helen Joseph Avenue. Concerns around Wildevy and neighbouring areas have been referred to Public Safety for assistance.

OWM then cut grass along Tamarisk Avenue, removed vegetation growing into the road and collected litter in Protea Park. A resident also helped clean near an area where bees are located.

Rustenburg ready for investment

Platinum Weekly newspaper | Rustenburg – The Rustenburg Local Municipality executive mayor councillor Shiela Mabale-Huma addressed the Sustainable Infrastructure Development Symposium South Africa (SIDSSA 26) in Century City, Cape Town, on Monday, 24 August 2026. The symposium brought together government and private-sector leaders to strengthen cooperation, attract investment and accelerate infrastructure development across Africa. Former South African president Thabo Mbeki was among the distinguished speakers. Mabale-Huma highlighted the importance of bulk infrastructure in supporting industrial development and densely populated communities. She also announced plans for a one-stop shop, supported by the Department of Trade, Industry and Competition, to fast-track land-use, zoning and building-plan approvals. “Rustenburg is ready for business, ready for uptake and ready for investment,” she said, inviting investors and sector leaders to help transform Africa’s Platinum Capital into a leading metropolitan investment destination.

North West women build their way to national stage

Platinum Weekly newspaper | North West – Two remarkable women artisans from the North West are breaking barriers and preparing to represent the province at the 2026 South African National Artisan Awards (SANAA). Qualified electrician Ulenda Mathebula from Brits and bricklayer artisan Mamello Giveness Boboko from Mosiane View in Mahikeng have been selected as national finalists. The winners will be announced during the awards ceremony on Saturday, 5 September 2026. Mathebula was inspired to pursue electrical engineering after seeing her community struggle during load-shedding. She completed her N1 to N6 qualifications and an apprenticeship before establishing Ulenda Electrical Solutions, through which she provides electrical services to her community. “Being selected as a national finalist validates my skills and proves that artisan work is not a second choice, but a respected and professional career,” she said. Mathebula plans to become a Master Installation Electrician, obtain her wireman’s licence and further specialise in solar energy. She also hopes to establish a training centre in the North West, create employment and empower future apprentices.

Qualified electrician and national SANAA finalist Ulenda Mathebula is proudly representing Brits and the North West.

Bricklayer artisan and national SANAA finalist Mamello Giveness Boboko is breaking barriers and inspiring young women to build their futures with their own hands.

Bullying can be physical, verbal, social or online. Children may become withdrawn, anxious, reluctant to attend school, or experience unexplained injuries or missing belongings. Talk openly with your child and report concerns to the school. Have your say in this week’s poll.

“No. I teach my child that differences deserve respect, kindness is strength, and standing up for someone being bullied can make a life-changing difference. No child should ever feel afraid to be themselves.”

André van Dyk, Rustenburg

“Bullying must be taken seriously. My child should always feel safe speaking to me without fear of judgement or blame. I would also address it with the school, because no child should suffer in silence.”
