The Outdoors and 4x4's Driving on Sand

Hope you all had a great Easter weekend! This week I will be covering some tips when driving on sand and dunes. It can be great fun, but not if you get stuck... so listen up!

Firstly, deflate your tyres to 45% of the normal pressure. If you are not carrying a heavy load, you can go down to 30%. Important: Only deflate tyres that are powered by the engine, do not deflate trailer tyres or if you have a 4x2, you can deflate the front tyres to 60%.

Now the fun part starts: Engage in four wheel driving and make sure the free-wheel hubs are locked, ensuring minimum complications. Use the hi-range 1st gear first before selecting low ranges to see how your vehicle responds. Remember: the lower the gear, the more likely you will find yourself stuck... Hopefully a friend will help – so make sure you do not embark on this trip alone.

In thick sand; avoid changing gears – take it steady and slow. Stick to the tracks of other vehicles and if you decide to stop; do not use your brakes. Let your vehicle stop with its own momentum. If you do get stuck, reverse a short distance and then move forward again.

Remember when driving on dunes and beaches

– you need a permit and know the tide, allot of people have lost their vehicles due to negligence in this way. Do not drive at high speeds; sand can be very surprising...
Until next week.
