Masses down tools to protest lack of safety in Rustenburg

Rustenburg - 2011-05-05. Over five thousands members of the National Union of Mineworkers (NUM) will on Saturday, the 7th May march in protest over lack of safety in the mines in Rustenburg.

The masses will gather at the taxi rank in Rustenburg in the morning around 09H00 and march to Rustenburg Municipal Offices where a memorandum will be delivered to the Department of Mineral Resources, the Department of Labour and representatives of the mining companies such as Impala Platinum, Lonmin, Angloplatinum and others.

The action is a build up towards the national day of mourning scheduled for September.

All provinces beginning with Rustenburg will be up in arms against the South African mining industry over their negligent behaviour.

“We are sick, we are tired, in fact we are sick and tired of the attitude of the mining industry when it comes to safety. When it comes to production, they take full responsibility, but when it comes to safety they argue the responsibility lies with the workers” says Erick Gcilitshana, the NUM’s National Secretary for Health and Safety. “If the mining industry does not want to change, we will change it. Saturday is the beginning of their end” he says.
