Bulb of the Week: Sandersonia

Let your garden twinkle this summer with a scattering of beautiful orange lanterns! Sandersonia is a genus, very aptly known by the name 'Chinese lanterns', as each individual flower looks remarkably like a pretty lantern. Their slender stems grow up to 30cm with bright green, lanceolate (lance shaped) leaves that can form delicate tendrils to help the plant scramble through shrubbery. Their large lantern shaped, orange blooms are spaced at intervals along this elegant stem. Each lantern dangles like a pendant from a short curving pedicel (a stem that joins a single flower to the main stem of a cluster of flowers) so when a gust of wind blows through your garden each flower sways independently in the breeze. The bonus with these lanterns is that they still glow a shade of pale to warm orange even if a cheeky gust tries to extinguish them!

Erratum

The information regarding the name of the vehicle in our article "Death by Wheel Bearing" published on the issue of 12 August 2011, Page 1 stated as "TATA Chana" was incorrect. Furthermore, there was no factual proof or expert reports stating that a wheel bearing was the cause of the accident or due to lack of quality control of the vehicle. Other witnesses also came to light, conflicting the facts as stated by earlier witnesses. New information received from representatives of the manufacturer, indicates that the vehicle was serviced to the satisfaction of the owner, before the accident occurred. As the Platinum Weekly is mostly dependant on information received from witnesses, it can sometimes appear to be misleading. We are however; always open for any new, updated information and different viewpoints on any case. The Platinum Weekly would like to take this opportunity to apologise for any incorrect information printed in error.

Platinum Weekly: (Platina Weekblad cc) disclaims all liability for any loss, damage, injury or expense, however caused, arising from the use of or reliance upon, in any matter, the information provided through this publication and does not warrant the truth, accuracy or completeness of the information provided.
