Sun City – This past weekend Rustenburg and Sun City was graced by the presence of many a sport star. South Africa's top cricketer, Hashim Amla, added another feather to his cap after he was named the country's Sports Star of the Year, at a glittering awards ceremony hosted at Sun City on Sunday 21 August.

The 28-year-old batsman – who was recently appointed vice-captain of the Proteas ODI and T20 teams – pipped four other nominees, Masters golf champion Charl Schwartzel, swimming world record holder Cameron van der Bergh, Springbok sevens flyhalf Cecil Afrika and leading Banyana Banyana goalscorer Noko Matlou, for the top accolade at the SA Sports Awards.

Along with the award, Amla took home a brand new Lexus (which he will drive for a year) and R250 000 in cash.

Incidentally, it was Amla's third major accolade during the past 3 months. He earlier won the Cricket South Africa Fans' Cricketer of the Year award at the 2011 SA Cricket Awards and was also named in the Mail & Guardian's annual list of 200 top Young South Africans in June this year.

The Premier of the North West, Thandi Modise, thanked the sponsors for playing a leading role in the revival of the awards. She said, "I speak for all our partners when I say that the revival of the South African Sports Awards would not have been possible without you. May we, as the government and private sector, work together to sustain this momentum and commitment to the spirit of sports development in our country and our community." Other category winners include: Noko Matlou (Sportswoman of the Year), Danny Jordaan (Administrator of the Year), The Bulls (Team of the Year), Bulls coach Frans Ludeke (Coach of the Year), Chad le Clos (Newcomer of the Year), Lucas Sithole (Sportsman of the Year with a Disability), Kgothatso Montjane (Sportswoman of the Year with a Disability), and Swimming South Africa (Federation of the Year Award).
