Lasers on Police Helicopters!

Rustenburg – Members of the public are warned to refrain from shining laser beams into the direction of any SAPS helicopters when they are busy with night flights, as such actions will interfere in their operations. High-powered hand-held laser pointers have become a significant hazard to law enforcement officers and pilots, as they can induce a temporary and dazzling flash/glare blindness. The sudden loss of vision from even a low-power laser pointer illumination can be disorientating and debilitating. Col. Salmon Vermaak – the commander of the Operational Response Unit in Potchefstroom – has requested that members of the public should be informed to educate their children about the seriousness of the matter. “A number of incidents have been reported at Lanseria and Cape Town airports. The laser beams can shine up to a kilometre into the air. Apart from the fact that the pilot is temporarily blinded, it can lead to permanent damage to the retina (eye), which might end the pilot’s career. Various charges will be laid against transgressors in terms of the Aviation Legislation,” said Col Vermaak. He also added that the laser pens are easily obtained for as cheap as R100. In addition, an incident occurred in Rustenburg and police members had to be dispatched to a town house complex where a child was found playing with the laser pen. Parents are usually surprised when the police suddenly appear at their premises, as they usually have no knowledge that their children are playing with these laser pens and the consequences of their actions.

An 18-year old teenager was arrested in Klerksdorp on the 9 September 2011 and spent the night in custody. The utilization of the helicopters in the fight against crime is of paramount importance!

Brigadier Sam Dube, who is the Rustenburg Station Commander, urges members of the public to assist the police in ensuring that this kind of disturbance never repeats itself.
