Gadhafi dead, says Libya Premier

Notorious Libyan dictator Moammar Gadhafi has been killed, interim Prime Minister Mahmoud Jibril said Thursday (20 Oct 2011). The confirmation came after hours of conflicting reports about the former leader's status.

Gadhafi's son, Mutassim, and his chief of intelligence, Abdullah al-Senussi, were also killed, according to Anees al-Sharif, a spokesman for the Tripoli military council. Revolutionary fighters attacked the house where Gadhafi was hiding, Information Minister Mahmoud Shammam told CNN. Gadhafi was shot while trying to flee, he said. "Colonel Gadhafi is history," he said.

A grisly cell phone video aired on Al-Jazeera Arabic showed a bloodied Gadhafi with a wound to his head. A cell phone photograph distributed by the news agency Agence France Presse also appeared to show Gadhafi severely wounded. CNN could not independently verify the authenticity of the images. US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, who visited Tripoli this week, could not confirm Gadhafi's capture or killing but said it would "add legitimacy and relief to the formation of a new government."

Abubaker Saad, who served as a Gadhafi aide for nine years, said it didn't really matter whether Gadhafi was dead or alive – as long as he was no longer a fugitive. "As long as he was on the run, he represented a very ominous danger to the Libyan people," Saad told CNN. "He represented a very ominous danger... to the idea of the democracy in Libya."
