drunk drivers arrested

Almost 20 000 drunk drivers have been arrested in South Africa in the past 11 months, the Transport Ministry said on Monday (Oct 17). "From October 2010 to September, 19 780 drunk drivers have been arrested," said spokesperson Logan Maistry.

Six hundred of those drivers were sentenced in the Western Cape. "Forty-seven were sentenced to prison without the option of paying fines or serving another type of sentence," Maistry said. One was jailed for four years, six for three years and the remaining 40 for between six months and two-and-a-half years.

"A further 12 had their licences cancelled." Maistry said about 14 million vehicles and drivers had been stopped and checked in the past 11 months.

From 31 August to 9 October, over 300 000 public transport vehicles were stopped and checked, with 1111 minibuses, 653 buses and 355 trucks taken out of service. On Thursday and Friday, almost 60 public transport buses were removed from service in Gauteng and the North West during raids at various bus depots. "This is part of the pre-December holiday clean-up operation," Maistry said. Another 125 drivers who failed to pay their traffic fines and did not contest the fines in court were arrested on the East Rand last week.

Transport Minister Sibusiso Ndebele reiterated that road users who disobeyed the rules of the road would face the consequences of their actions. "The carnage on our roads must be stopped," Ndebele said.

Wesizwe appoints nonexec directors

Platinum exploration and development company Wesizwe said on Monday it appointed Professor Wiseman Nkulu and Robert Garnett as independent nonexecutive directors to the company (17 October 2011).

Nkulu, the previous president of the International Organisation of Employers, is a director at AngloGold Ashanti, Datatec and Rothschild South Africa, as well as the Ethics Institute of South Africa. Garnett, a chartered accountant with 40 years experience, recently retired from the IFRS Foundation, after serving ten years as a board member for the International Accounting Standards Board, and as chairperson of the IFRS interpretation committee.

He has experience in mining, manufacturing and financial services, and also served as executive VP for finance at Anglo American.

Ex-warder in court for fraud

Rustenburg – A previously convicted ex-warder was arrested after he tried to defraud a woman in Ikageng, North West police said on Saturday (Oct 15).

Lt-Col Lesego Metsi said the 41-year-old ex-warder allegedly promised the woman he would get her a job in the correctional services if she paid him R2 500. Col Metsi said the woman paid the man, but he asked her to convince her sister to pay the same amount for the same job. She then contacted police and the man was arrested on Friday. He was dismissed from the correctional services department after being found guilty of fraud and corruption.

He appeared in the Potchefstroom Magistrate's Court on Monday 17 October and was remanded in custody.

Who will police the police?

Wolmaransstad – Constable Gobusamang Molamu (34), who appeared briefly before the Wolmaransstad Magistrate's Court on Monday 17 October 2011 on charges of bribery and corruption, was granted R1 500 bail. Molamu is expected to appear before court again on the 2 December 2011.

The arrest came after the police constable was lured into a police trap. It is alleged that the suspect – who is a detective Constable attached to Sannishof Stock-Theft Unit in the North West Province – made several attempts to meet with two accused who were arrested for a stock-theft case in Atamelang, in order for him to solicit bribes amounting to R8 000 to 'make their case disappear'.

The constable initially secured an appointment with the two accused on the 12 October 2011 to take place in Ottosdal, Lichtenburg, where he could collect the outstanding amount of R2 000 and due to transport problems he could not make it to Ottosdal. The information at our disposal is that the suspect in two occasions successfully solicited an amount of R3 000 from the two and when he failed to show up for the third appointment, he allegedly called the accused (now complainants) that he will be in Klerksdorp on Friday 14 October 2011. On Saturday 15 October 2011, the complainants were again informed by the suspect that he will be in Wolmaransstad where the three can now meet for the final payment.

Control action was conducted, the suspect was handed R2 000 at the local Engine Petrol filling station and the Anti Corruption Unit arrested him.
