'Superbug' claims 3

Rustenburg – While there have been no reports of the newly developed 'superbug' virus in Rustenburg so far, a third person has died after being infected at the Life Glynnwood Hospital in Benoni, a spokesperson of the health facility said on Tuesday (Oct 18).
 "We have not had any cases of the bug here in Rustenburg. Nothing has been reported as far as I know," said Mariki Shelly from Life Peglerae Hospital. Ferncrest Hospital in Rustenburg has also had no reports of the bug while it was not immediately clear if the situation at other health facilities in the North West was the same. One more case had also been detected at a private facility, bringing the total number of confirmed cases to 10 since Friday. Further details of the three patients who died were not immediately available. However, on Monday, the National Institute for Communicable Diseases (NICD) stated that the patients' infection already developed to an advanced stage upon admission, due to underlying chronic illnesses. Dr Steve Taylor, medical director for Life Healthcare said the New Delhi metallo-β-lactamase produces an enzyme NDM-1 that makes it extremely resistant to antibiotics. Previously, most patients infected with NDM-1 could be traced back to people who had recently visited India or received medical treatment there. People could live for months without even knowing they were carriers of this bacterium and would not present any symptoms. However, when the infected human's immune system becomes compromised, or when gut colonising NDM-1 producing bacteria spread to the bloodstream or urinary tract, potentially serious infections could occur. Extra monitoring has been put in place and all patients admitted to the intensive care and high care units were being screened. Doctors would also be asked to review antibiotic treatments they had ordered.
