Young NW Nguni Cattle breeder wins the best National Beef farmer award!

NW – One of the Nguni Cattle Development project's beneficiaries, Mr Clifford Nkokou from Ganyesa in the Dr Ruth Segomotsi Mompati district, has once more ensured that the North West province stays on the map by beating two other beef cattle finalists from Limpopo and Mpumalanga respectively, to win the coveted AB-SA-ARC Best National Emerging Beef Farmer of the Year 2011 (7 November 2011). By winning this position, Nkokou took home a trophy, a certificate and a trip to the United States of America in 2012. The awards ceremony was recently held in Pretoria. The competition which is coordinated by the Agricultural Research Council (ARC) sets the stage for developing farmers across the country to meet and share experiences with elite farmers and adapt best cattle management practices. Nkokou has strong confidence that this recognition puts him on the right track to realize his dream of becoming a flourishing Nguni and Bonsmara breeder. "I got into livestock farming after securing a loan from Land Bank with which I purchased a few Bonsmara breeds that subsequently increased considerably. The introduction of the indigenous Nguni cattle breed by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development in the province was a breath of fresh air into my farming business as I am a proud owner of more than 24 Nguni cattle".
