CONSERVE WATER

Rustenburg – The water crisis that hit Capetonians a year ago has encouraged the Rustenburg Local Municipality (RLM) to try and avoid such a dilemma from ever happening in its locality.

To achieve this, a three-year water conservation and demand management programme that aims to proactively safeguard the city's water security and preservation called 'Metsi a Rona' was launched at the Rustenburg Civic Centre on Tuesday 17 July.
The launch was attended by municipal manager Nqobile Sithole and executive mayor of RLM Mpho Khunou, as well as dignitaries of RLM.

"South Africa is a water-scarce country. The obligation to preserve and use water wisely lies on all of us," says Nqobile.

"In our previous financial year, the municipality experienced a concerning 43% loss in water from leaks and general wasteful usage. We also had legacy water infrastructure and systems which made it difficult for us to proactively prevent this loss.
There was also a gap in the way our people understood by-laws that govern water usage and preservation."

"The critical success factor of this programme is the buy-in and commitment of our people and the business community at large in protecting this scarce commodity that is water," adds mayor Khunou. "It's important that we all take collective responsibility to keep our water supply stable and sufficient to sustain the municipality in its entirety."
