ALL THE GLORY TO GOD

Rustenburg – Many great tales begin with an orphan abandoned on someone's door step, but in South Africa, it is an all too familiar sight. On Friday 2 November, a baby boy was left at the entrance of a smallholding on the R24 in Rustenburg.

The unidentified infant was discovered by George Pule, known affectionately as 'Oupa Steyn', a local worker on his way to work. Oupa Steyn reportedly spotted the days-old baby, wrapped in a blue blanket underneath a bougainvillea bush and immediately summoned for help. Alet du Plessis and Chantelle Barret rushed to his aid and managed to save the little one from his dire circumstances. According to police spokesperson captain Elsabe Augustides, the baby is about a week old and except for being a little thirsty, in perfect health.

This was a case of being in the right place at the right time. If George hadn't passed by or if Alet and Chantelle weren't able to rush to his aid, this story could have been far more tragic... And like the first chapter of a good book, this story leaves us with more questions than answers. Where is Michael from? Who are his parents? How did he end up there? What will happen to our little hero?

A case of child abandonment is being investigated and the police requests anybody with information to please contact them on 014 590 4115, 014 590 4116, or 014 590 4117.

Hero of this tale: George Pule (aka Oupa Steyn) with the week-old baby boy.
