

Capro Celebrates 68 Years of EXCELLENCE

Capro (Central Advertising and Public Relations Office), a key role player in South African print media industry, celebrates 68 years of existence. Opening its doors in 1950, Capro now promotes advertising agencies, government institutions and big national companies in small and mostly rural newspapers.

Capro chairperson of the board Rishaad Mahomed said: "As far as the future is concerned, Capro is very optimistic. Capro is extremely lucky in that it represents publishers who are also independent thinkers."

Capro takes pride in the remarkable progress made through linking up advertisers with their target audience and adding value to community press.

The appointment of their new general manager, Arashaad Saint in March 2018, with his inherent capacity for sales along with high level of professionalism, has seen Capro reshaping its relevance in terms of corporate identity and strengthened relationship with its clients.

"I am delighted to have been granted this fantastic opportunity and I am very excited to face what lays ahead in the future. I am privileged and honoured to be working with a team who has stood the test of time. I cannot believe that some employees have been in the organization for 30 years, this certainly is a remarkable achievement. Together we will take Capro to greater heights," said Arashaad.

Another bump in the road

Rustenburg – After constant pressure applied by DA councillor for ward 18 Martha Lerm on the Rustenburg Local Municipality (RLM) to help students safely cross the road at Hoërskool Grenswag, an action plan ensued.

"RLM started casting breaking strips, but the project was placed on hold due to a problem raised by a local business forum," said Martha.

Warning: high risk area

Rustenburg – The confusing stop sign at the intersection of Buiten and Molen streets, is an accident waiting to happen.

This intersection allows vehicles traveling to Zinniaville in Molen street to proceed without having to stop – while vehicles coming from Zinniaville or turning into and from Buiten street have to stop.

The confusion with this intersection can cause serious risks for motorists turning from Buiten street towards Zinniaville as the passing vehicles travelling straight, do not have to stop and have the right of way.

A possible solution to this problem will be to erect a stop sign for both lanes traveling to Zinniaville.

Self-defence class for women: 24 November

Rustenburg – Shihan Albert Venter will present a self-defence class for women on 24 November.

Self-defence is a set of awareness, assertiveness, verbal confrontation, skills, safety strategies and physical techniques that enable someone to successfully escape, resist, and survive violent attacks. A good self-defence class provides psychological awareness and verbal skills, not just physical training. Looking at the crime statistics of the day and age that
