

Attack on 'Terminator' puts SA in bad light

Sandton – The attack in Sandton by an unknown assailant on the former California governor and movie star Arnold Schwarzenegger, has put South African in a bad light at a time when the country is pulling out all stops to show a reduction in crime activities.

Arnold, who is a well-known action hero for his portrayal of the ruthless cyborg character in the popular 1984 movie 'The Terminator', was attacked from behind with a flying kick while attending the Arnold Classic Africa Festival in Sandton on Saturday 18 May.

While the motive of the attacker is unknown, the incident could portray the country as an unsafe destination to the rest of the world, given Arnold's high profile in society. However, the former movie star, who is now 71-years old, did not lay charges against the person who attacked him.

"...there is nothing to worry about. I thought I was just jostled by the crowd, which happens a lot. I only realised I was kicked when I saw the video like all of you," Arnold said.

Arnold Schwarzenegger, moments before the kick.
