

HAS YOUR PARTNER EVER...?

Rustenburg – Gender-based violence is making headlines more often these days. Our annual national 16 Days of Activism for No Violence Against Women and Children held from 25 November to 10 December, aims to increase awareness about abuse and encourages victims and witnesses to speak up.

- Monitored your phone calls, text messages, emails, Facebook, etc?
- Refused to let you phone your friends or family?

- Used physical force (push, punch, slap, choke, shake, use objects/weapons, etc.)?
- Physically harmed others (children, pets, family members, friends, neighbours, etc.)?

- Threatened to kill themselves if you leave?
- Threatened to turn you into the authorities (police, immigration, etc.) if you leave?
- Used your religious or spiritual beliefs to manipulate or control you, or to justify violence against women? Denied you freedom of religion, by refusing to let you practice your spiritual beliefs or insisting that you follow theirs?
- Blamed you for their abusive behaviour, and told you it was your fault?
- Destroyed your possessions?
- Showed up unexpectedly, when they were not invited and not welcome, to social or work events?
- Stolen your money?

Some abusers deny being abusive. Some freely admit they have behaved badly, show great remorse, and promise never to do it again – though they almost always do.

Many abusive relationships develop gradually and, at first, it might be tempting to write their behaviour off as harmless, perhaps just signs of love or jealousy or emotional insecurity.

But as women have said for years, abuse is NOT about jealousy or love – it is about power and control.
